1. Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

On lines 1-3 of independent claim 1, the phrase "of a type having" and the remainder of the preamble of the claim are indefinite and unclear in context as to whether the items recited in the preamble are claimed. Similarly, the phrase "of a type having" in the preamble of independent claim 11 makes the claim indefinite and unclear as to whether the claimed method of claim 11 is restricted to the context recited in the claim 11 preamble.

Throughout claims 1-12, the uses of the term "personal computer" are indefinite and unclear in context.

Throughout claims 1-12, the uses of the term "PDW extractor circuit" are indefinite and unclear in context.

Throughout claims 1-12, the uses of the term "high-speed memory" are indefinite and unclear in context.

On lines 6-7 of claim 1, the phrase "without interfering with the normal operations of said electronic surveillance system" is indefinite and unclear in context. What level of effect of the claimed system on the surveillance system would constitute "interfering with the normal operations"? The same problem occurs with a similar phrase on lines 6-7 of independent claim 11.

Dependent claims 2-10 and 12 are unclear in that they depend from unclear independent claims 1 and 11.

2. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

The examiner-cited prior art is of general interest for showing prior art electronic surveillance systems and methods that use pulse descriptor words.

Please especially note Caschera ('385), which would use memory storage similar to that claimed in claim 1 in its histogram processing (see abstract).
